HIGHER EDUCATION AND MORALITY

According to Swami Vivekananda, 'Education is the manifestation of the divine perfection already in man.' Being a Vedantist, Swamiji believed that individual selves are nothing but the manifestation of the Ultimate self. As such he dedicated his life for the service of the masses. He considered service to mam is the greatest worship of God. For this service to be fruitful, one has to apply existing knowledge onto the work one is doing. This application is the goal of a proper education, which was deemed to be the tool that could make a man perfect. But for Swamiji perfection cannot be obtained from outside. It is in fact inherent within the individual. Education is nothing but the assimilation of ideas. It is not providing mere information. So, during the process of learning both the learner and the teacher must be dedicated towards one's duties. The ancient Gurukul system of India demanded such of dedication. Even a prince was supposed to stay in the hermitage of his Guru and learnt not only the scriptures but also practical knowledge of life. He was treated at par with other disciples. Right from the formative years a child was taught the basic values of life, like- love, compassion, tolerance, cooperation etc. The ancient education system was not compartmentalized into strict disciplines but rather the aim was to give a holistic education which not only made people efficient performers in their specific profession, but also mould children into citizens who could contribute to the betterment of the society as a whole and not just his or her own profession.

The holistic education has got lost in our anglicized education system which was the result of a feudal English society of the pre-war world order.

It is said that if an individual can assimilate at least five ideas and build up his character with the help of those ideas, he is considered to be more educated than those who have gathered information, even has learnt the whole library. Education is the key to character building. A man ought to be human first before he can be anything else. In the era of extreme professional competition we compete not only with others but also with ourselves.

The quality and relevance of education with reference to the changing socio-economic atmosphere is of utmost concern. Thus the goal of education should be to train people in a manner that can help us to solve the problems we face today, such as climate crisis. Hence, the need to reimagine education and its relevance to the rapidly changing socio-economic realities of our times has never been higher. In this regard, moral education should be inducted as a component of higher education.

Education has always played an important role for the desired social changes which is considered as the need of the hour. Our present education system is a lopsided affair which is concerned mainly with the training of the mind. But the training of the heart as well as of the soul is equally important as it awakens our deepest feelings of love, compassion, non-violence, charity etc.

There is a constant threat of misuse of education if it is not guided by moral values and ideas. There comes the importance of ethical and moral teachings. The present education system is more career oriented. The students are always in the rat race and as such devoid of moral, social and cultural values. The need for preservation and inculcation of moral values is intensely felt throughout the world.

After the second world war Bertrand Russell pointed out that modern civilization cannot survive until and unless it is inspired by ethical and spiritual values. There is crisis of value all over the world which is considered to be due to explosion in the field of science and technology, population, man's endless quest for material comfort so on and so forth.

Educational institutions are considered as the primary agencies just after the family of inculcating moral and social values in the minds of the young. That is why education is considered as a condition and an agent for social changes.

Morality is concerned only with voluntary actions. Moral actions are always voluntary in nature. Non-voluntary actions cannot be considered as moral. So, the question arise whether morality can be taught? If it has to be inculcated through education system then it cannot be considered as voluntary. In this regard the ambience of the institution should be such that a student can acquire moral values by himself observing his teachers and fellow students.

Family is considered as the primary learning institution. So, has a pivotal role for imparting moral values from childhood. There must be a conducive environment in the family. The role of the society also cannot be ignored in this regard.

With the advancement of science and technology the world becomes a global village. So, there is inter changes of thoughts and ideas which must be value oriented. The culture also plays an important role in our life. The concept of culture is valueoriented consisting of truth, beauty and goodness. Every culture emphasized on the pursuit of human values. Truth, beauty and goodness (Satya, Siva, Sundara) are considered as the three highest values of life from the perspective of Indian Philosophy.

The National Education Policy 2020 has tried to focus on values of life, culture and society so that it can stimulates the spiritual, intellectual and physical faculties of an individual as depicted by Swami Vivekananda.

PROBLEMS OF HIGHER EDUCATION IN ASSAM

Different studies show till now education is not accessible for all in Assam. Only some selected students are able to go to the colleges or universities. Due to lack of seat capacity some students are unable to get admission because every year hundred and above students go to the particular department from different colleges under that particular University. But the seat capacity of a particular department is 40/50. As a result many students are unable to get admission and waste their time and money.

Quality : This is one of the important aspects of higher education. But if we see whether the quality is maintained or not? In a real sense we have seen that day by day quality is deteriorating and quantity is increasing.

Lack of Research : Higher education should be research oriented. It tries to seek some new problems that exist in society and to provide solutions. But it seems the higher education system is quite bookish. Less emphasis upon research activities.

Infrastructure : Most colleges in rural areas have extremely poor infrastructure. These institutions have not adequate physical facilities like- indoor stadium, fully computerized library with rich collection of reference books and national and international journals to compel the students to spend more time in colleges. Hence such educational institutions are unable to fulfill the needs of the students.

Teaching Method : We are in a techno- scientific era. But from different studies we found that still many institutions have adopted traditional methods. Theoretical knowledge is still disseminated through chalk and talk methods of teaching. The new technologies are yet to be introduced.

Mitali Ghosh Paul
Assistant Professor
Department of Zoology
B N College

Lack of skill based education : Education should be the type which can develop different skills of the students so that they can adjust any situation of their life. Lack of proper planning: From different studies we found there is a lack of proper planning. It seems higher education system is not based upon any adequate planning. Without planning our higher education system is running. Every year batch by batch students are coming out but they have no any proper placement opportunities. After completion of their degree where they has gone? What they will do? There is no any definite answer. They again come back to home and remain the same.

Educated unemployment : Educated unemployment is one the burning issue in Assam. Higher education system creates numbers of educated unemployment. After completion of course most of the graduate students unable to getting a job. So they become educated and unemployed. As a result it increases some social problems like drug addiction, substance dependency, poor family environment etc.

Over Crowded of the Classroom : In some context it had seen that some colleges facing various problems due to over students in a class. In recently education has become free in provincialised colleges where numbers of student gets admitted. It crossed to the general ratio of student: teacher ratio, i.e. 30:1. Is multiplied by 100:1. So that it is unable to control the classroom for the teacher.

Curriculum : Curriculum is also defective. It can't cater to the need of the young people. Curriculum is like that which provides some material for collecting marks in examinations. It is unable to provide proper knowledge.

Reservation : Reservation itself creates some problems. Due to caste based reservation most of the students belong from rich family having low quality is able to getting admission in reputed institution. But poor family well talented students are unable to get admission. So reservation should be there but it should be merit basis not caste based. Great economist Sam Pitroda is also against this caste based reservation system though he belongs to scheduled caste students.

Open and distance learning : Open and distance learning is most suitable and acceptable according to the changing time period. It can cater to the needs of the numbers of people who are unable to complete their education due to different reasons. But its poor administration creates some problems which can indirectly help to increase quantity, decrease quality.

Privatization : The higher and technical education in India is being increasingly privatized in multiple ways. Private institutions are mostly commercial and they are profit oriented. So their cost is very high. Only the elite section of the society can admit their child in private education. Daily wage earner students are unable to get the opportunity to see that kind of institution. In this context again a question may arise regarding equal education to all.

Value Education : Value means worth, desirability. Nowadays values among people are decreasing. Due to the use of power and knowledge they become egocentric and selfish. They forgot about values, ethics, morality etc. In consequence corruption, indiscipline, violence, exploitation, selfishness etc are being increased and in the contrary external human values like-truth, beauty, goodness, love, honesty, patience, sympathy, etc are being decreased
